London, November 16.

ON Saturday Morning arrived the Mail due from Holland. It brought the Continuation of the Journal of the Imperial Army in Sicily, from the 9th to the [illegible] of October, N. S. inclusive. At present we give that Part of it only at large, which relates to the storming of the Counterguard of the Citadel of Messina on the 17th

October 16. All this Day we have been employed in making Preparations for storming the Counterguard to Morrow, when 10 Cannon will be ready to play against the Flank of the Enemy's Bastion The Gallery between the Ravelin which we took on the 8th, and the Counterguard, is brought to entire Perfection, and fenced by an Espaulement against the Enemy's Fire from the said Flank: We have begun to make Lodgments on the Foot of the Breach at the Head of [illegible] two Galleries. The Forces commanded by General Bonneval having all joined our Army, it was found proper to send under the Command of Lieutenant General Baron Wachtendock, and Major General Count d'Arnauld, a Detachment of 2000 Fuzileers, 200 Grenadiers, and some Hundreds of Horse, Germans and Hussars, with some Artillery, to take Possession of the Post of S. aletta. Killed 22, wounded 53.

17. All being prepared for storming the Counterguard, 300 Grenadiers and 300 Pioneers were commanded this Morning at Ten a Clock to begin the Assault, and to endeavour to take Post on the Counterguard. Accordingly they fell on with the same Resolution and Bravery as had been shewn at the storming of the Ravelin; and notwithstanding they found the Enemy so strongly intrenched behind the Parapet of the Counterguard, with great Pieces of Timber and large Casks filled with Earth, that it was impossible to dislodge them from thence; (besides that the Enemy made such a terrible Fire chiefly from their Flank and most with Cartridge-shot, which sometimes took off 30 or 40 Men at once) yet the Assailants, far from flinching back, defended themselves a long while on the Breach, till some more Men and Pioneers were commanded after them to try a second Time whether it might not be practicable to lodge themselves at least above the Breach; but it being in vain, we were at length necessitated to spare our Men, and order them to come back, contenting ourselves with making a Lodgment on the Middle of the Breach.

18. Last Night we extended the said Lodgment in two Places, and made all possible Expedition in carrying on the Sap. A Battery of some Cannon is raising on the Ravelin to ruin the Enemy's Flank, it being otherwise impossible for us to maintain the Breach without great Loss. The Conduct and Behaviour of our Troops, both Officers and common Soldiers, in Yesterday's Assault, deserve the highest Praise: Lieutenant General Count Wallis, and Major General Count Diesbach, have distinguished themselves as usual. M. Planta, Collonel of the Regiment of Lucini, was dangerously wounded. Our Loss in the Trenches for these two Days past it but inconsiderable: As for our Loss in the Assault, we shall give the Particulars in our next. P. S. About Noon the Enemy beat a Parley, and offered to capitulate.

19. We are settling the Capitulation with the Enemy. Just now comes Advice, that the Garrison in Scaletta have declared they are willing to surrender, as soon as the Capitulation of the Citadel shall be regulated.

London, November 16.

On Friday last about 11 in the Morning His Majesty imbarked on the Carolina Yacht at Helvoetsluys: The Wind was contrary that Morning but turned fair as soon as His Majesty came on board his Yacht: His Majesty arrived at Gravelend on Saturday about One a Clock in the Afternoon, the Wind having turned about again but a little before. From thence His Majesty proceeded to London, and passing over the Bridge came to St. James's about Seven in the Evening. The Guns in the Park and at the Tower were fired upon the first News of His Majesty's Arrival, and again at his coming over the Bridge and at his entring St. James's Palace. The Streets through which His Majesty passed were crowded with People, who made loud Acclamations for his happy Arrival. There were likewise Illuminations, Bonfires, and all other Demonstrations of publick Joy.

Yesterday there was a very numerous Appearance of the Nobility and other Persons of Distinction at St. James's: His Majesty went to Chapel, the Lord Coventry carrying the Sword before him; and His Majesty (God be praised) is in perfect Health.

Late on Saturday Night arrived an Express from Falmouth, with Letters from Vice-Admiral Mighells, advising that on the 11th Instant in the Evening he put into that Port, with His Majesty's Ships Ipswich, Enterprize, Kinsale, and Bideford, and with almost all the Transports; some having been separated from him, Part of which it was supposed were run a head. He designed to proceed for Spithead, the Place of general Rendezvous, by the first Opportunity of Wind and Weather.
